INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

The goal of the conference is to examine the many facets of heritage capitalization and how it relates to contemporary issues such as digital transitions, energy problems, food crises, and environmental preservation. Heritage capitalization serves as a link between the past and the future in a world of swift change and increasing complexity. Our objective is to promote discussions, encourage teamwork, and increase awareness of the ways in which heritage may support sustainable development.

With a variety of issues influencing this field, the conference provides a forum for scholars, professionals, policymakers, and practitioners to share ideas and experiences about the preservation and use of cultural heritage. It seeks to encourage interdisciplinary cooperation and offer insightful information on the complex nature of heritage in the contemporary world.

The conference looks at cutting-edge methods and tools for preserving and advancing cultural assets. It covers topics such as using augmented reality, virtual reality, and other digital tools. The conference also discusses the creation of virtual museums, public engagement with cultural heritage through digital platforms, the influence of environmental factors on cultural heritage, and sustainable approaches to heritage development and preservation. In order to promote comprehensive approaches to heritage preservation, exploitation, and development, the conference encourages interdisciplinary collaboration by bringing together specialists from a variety of sectors, including archaeology, history, architecture, technology, environmental science, and social sciences. The conference's global scope makes it an excellent forum for contrasting and comparing heritage issues and solutions
